ABOUT TRACE

Trace was born in Michigan in 1996 and two years later, moved to Noblesville, IN where he resides with his parents Dan and Amy and two younger sisters Shaelen and Maris. He graduated in 2015 from Guerin Catholic High School and then began his college career at Wabash in Crawfordsville, IN.

Previously, Trace was a healthy and impressive athlete, student, and artist, but as of 2015 he has been suffering from an undiagnosed, degenerative brain disease. The first symptoms of his condition were noticed around age 18 when the family saw a change in his speech, fine motor skills, and athleticism. His words became rapid, rushed, mumbled and very hard to understand. His handwriting became very small and messy. However, the biggest change of all was in his athletic performance where previously, he had always shined. He began losing agility, speed, and strength both on and off the field.

During his freshman year at Wabash College, it became apparent that something very serious was happening. Additional symptoms began to unfold, including trouble with balance, coordination, and swallowing which required that Trace leave college after Thanksgiving of his sophomore year. Since then, his condition has progressed and he now requires 24/7 care at home for all daily living activities. Presently, his condition has resulted in general diffuse brain atrophy, muscle rigidity, spasticity, and weakness. He has lost most motor control skills, his speech, and is confined to his bed where he relies on a feeding tube for all nutrition. After almost 3 years of countless tests and numerous treatments, there is still no known cause, diagnosis, or cure.

There is no doubt Trace is living up to his name.

Trace: Courageous, the Battler, Brave, Warlike, and Fierce.
